The Japanese Cabinet released the Development Cooperation Charter in June 2023, which stated, "In its development cooperation, Japan has maintained the spirit of jointly creating things that suit partner countries while respecting ownership, intentions and intrinsic characteristics of the country concerned based on a field-oriented approach through dialogue and collaboration. It has also maintained the approach of building reciprocal relationships with developing countries in which both sides learn from each other and grow and develop together." I. Concept

Background

Since the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (UNCRPD) has been adopted in 2008 at the United Nations, now it has been ratified by 192 countries and regional integration organizations.

According to World report on disability produced by WHO, about 15% of the world's population have some form of disability. The number of people with disabilities and their families, especially living in developing countries, has been increasing caused by civil wars, malnutrition, lack of medical care and rehabilitation. Moreover, they have been suffered from poverty due to systematic problems such as lack of employment, deprivation of rights, and social problems including prejudice or discrimination.

Although the UNCRPD clearly stated persons with disabilities have equal rights to others and live in the society with dignity, many challenges have remained. Thus, realization of the UNCRPD is an urgent task, and persons with disabilities are expected to play an active role in this process.

In addition, September in 2015, at the meeting of United Nations, Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) has been adopted instead of MDGs. The slogan of this new goal is "No one will be left behind". Needless to say, persons with disabilities are included in the slogan. In order to achieve the above goals, persons with disabilities must be involved in the development process and they have to participate in the improvement stage of domestic laws, regulations, projects, and systems.

Japan ratified the UNCRPD in January 2014. During the preparatory process towards ratification, persons with disability and their organizations played a leading role in domestic systematic reforms such as the formation of "the Act for Eliminating Discrimination against Persons with Disabilities", disability policy reforms and other necessary activities. The participants are expected to learn from those experiences and adopt them to their local needs.

This course aims to strengthen the capacity of leaders with disabilities in contributing to the UNCRPD implementation in their respective countries.

For what?

This program aims to transmit knowledge and skills to the participants and enable him/her to contribute to the implementation of the UNCRPD and improvement of living standards of persons with disabilities in their countries.

For whom?

This program is designed for persons with disabilities who are a middle-ranking officer at their organization with a total of 5 to 20 years of experience in the disability field. In addition, they must demonstrate a clear intention to work for their organization upon returning from Japan. In detail, persons with disabilities who have been active as leaders in the above mentioned organizations for more than five years and are planning to work in the field of disability for more than three years are desirable.

How?

In this program, the participant will obtain knowledge and skills through the means of lectures, site visits, workshops, and discussions on a wide range of issues related to the implementation of the UNCRPD and contribution to creating society for all.

Outcomes of the program will be synthesized in their Final Report, submission of which will mark the end of the program in Japan and help to shape their activities after they return to their own organizations. Participants will also deliver a presentation based on their Final Report before leaving Japan.

For Your Reference

JICA and Capacity Development

Technical cooperation is people-to-people cooperation that supports partner countries in enhancing their comprehensive capacities to address development challenges by their own efforts. Instead of applying Japanese technology per se to partner countries, JICA's technical cooperation provides solutions that best fit their needs by working with people living there. In the process, consideration is given to factors such as their regional characteristics, historical background, and languages. JICA does not limit its technical cooperation to human resources development; it offers multi-tiered assistance that also involves organizational strengthening, policy formulation, and institution building.

Implementation methods of JICA's technical cooperation can be divided into two approaches. One is overseas cooperation by dispatching experts and volunteers in various development sectors to partner countries; the other is domestic cooperation by inviting participants from developing countries to Japan. The latter method is the Knowledge Co-Creation Program, formerly called Training Program, and it is one of the core programs carried out in Japan. By inviting officials from partner countries and with cooperation from domestic partners, the Knowledge Co-Creation Program provides technical knowledge and practical solutions for development issues in participating countries.

The Knowledge Co-Creation Program (Group & Region Focus) has long occupied an important place in JICA operations. About 400 pre-organized courses cover a wide range of professional fields, ranging from education, health, infrastructure, energy, trade, and finance, to agriculture, rural development, gender mainstreaming, and environmental protection. A variety of programs is being customized by the different target organizations to address the specific needs, such as policy-making organizations, service provision organizations, as well as research and academic institutions. Some programs are organized to target a certain group of countries with similar developmental challenges.

Japanese Development Experience

Japan, as the first non-Western nation to become a developed country, built itself into a country that is free, peaceful, prosperous, and democratic while preserving its tradition. Japan will serve as one of the best examples for our partner countries to follow in their own development.

From engineering technology to production management methods, most of the know-how that has enabled Japan to become what it is today has emanated from a process of adoption and adaptation, of course, has been accompanied by countless failures and errors behind the success stories.

Through Japan's progressive adaptation and application of systems, methods, and technologies from the West in a way that is suited to its own circumstances, Japan has developed a storehouse of knowledge not found elsewhere from unique systems of organization, administration, and personnel management to such social systems as the livelihood improvement approach and governmental organization. It is not easy to apply such experiences to other countries where the circumstances differ, but the experiences can provide ideas and clues useful when devising measures to solve problems.

JICA, therefore, would like to invite as many leaders of partner countries as possible to come and visit us, to mingle with the Japanese people, and witness the advantages as well as the disadvantages of Japanese systems, so that integration of their findings might help them reach their developmental objectives.
