ADBI Special Talk: Women and Girls in Climate Change Intersection

30 March 2023, Online
13:00 – 14:00 Bangkok Time / 15:00 – 16:00 Tokyo Time

We are pleased to invite you to the “ADBI Special Talk: Women and Girls in Climate Change Intersection” to celebrate the International Women's month on 30 March 2023 (Online), 13:00 – 14:00 Bangkok Time / 15:00 – 16:00 Tokyo Time. The program is enclosed.

Climate change coupled with gender inequality is among the most concerning risks facing the world today. The climate crisis is not gender neutral. Its impacts affect ways of life, livelihoods, health, safety, and security for women and girls disproportionately, magnifying gender inequality globally. Against this backdrop, the webinar will promote knowledge and raise awareness of women's empowerment and youth's contribution in the global climate action. The discussion will highlight the challenges, opportunities, and gender-responsive solutions to climate change adaptation and mitigation, as well as provide a platform for youth's voices on climate-change and sustainable development.

Government officials and interested agencies whose works are related to the theme at hand are invited to this special event. We would like to request you to share this invitation and the registration link below with interested parties, as this is an open registration event. Once you complete the registration form, you will receive login details to join the webinar automatically via Zoom. Please keep and use the information for attending the event on the scheduled date.
